

Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA) Policy – Meridian Analytics Inc.

When an NDA Is Required

An NDA must be executed before any confidential information is shared with a prospective client, vendor, contractor, or partner, including during early-stage sales conversations and technical due diligence.

Standard vs. Mutual NDAs

The Legal department maintains two templates: a one-way NDA (used when only Meridian's information will be disclosed) and a mutual NDA (used when both parties will share confidential information). Sales and Business Development should default to the mutual template unless directed otherwise by Legal.

Approval and Signing Authority

NDAs based on the standard templates may be signed by any Director-level employee or above. Any deviation from the standard template language must be reviewed and approved by Legal before signing, regardless of the signer's seniority.

Term of Confidentiality Obligations

Standard NDAs impose confidentiality obligations for 3 years from the date of disclosure, or 5 years for NDAs involving trade secrets or proprietary machine learning methodologies.

Record Keeping

All executed NDAs must be uploaded to the central contract repository within 5 business days of signing, tagged with the counterparty name and expiration date, so Legal can track upcoming renewals or expirations.
